Hello David,

I'm writing to tell you that I looked at some properties in the country last week. You know, houses in the country are usually bigger than houses in the city. Moreover, houses in London are really too expensive, more expensive than in Paris, I think. So, my wife and I are going to move into a bigger house in the country by the end of the year.

I saw two houses in particular. Oak House is in the beautiful Dorset countryside. It's more than 600 years old. It was built during the Tudor times and was completely renovated in 2001. It's a three-bedroom detached house, with a nice big garden and a glass greenhouse, where my wife can grow flowers and vegetables even in winter. There's a lake nearby. We won't have any problems with noisy neighbours: we will be completely isolated because there aren't any houses for miles!

The other one, Rose Cottage, is a two-bedroom semi-detached house in Kent. It is near the station, and this is more convenient for me, if I don't want to use the car. It is made of red bricks and it isn't as big as Oak House. It is simple, but spacious and light, because it has double glazed windows, a new kitchen with an electric oven, and a dishwasher. The garden is smaller than Oak's, but it is an ideal playground for children and pets.

I'm going to visit the houses again with my wife. I think she'll prefer the older house because she adores growing flowers. When she sees it, she'll fall in love with it and I hope it will become ours!
